Army Chief Seen Stronger

LEOPOLDVILLE.—Ex-Premier Patrice Lumumba, facing trial for inciting rebellion in the army and other crimes, was moved out of here and put under the guard of Col. Joseph Mobutu's most trusted command.

U.N. officials were understood to be urging that the beaten-up ex-premier should not be further mistreated. Mr. Lumumba was beaten nearly senseless on Friday night before being dragged by the neck into a crowd

Mr. Lumumba was driven to Thysville, 100 miles west of The trip was made less than seven hours after Mr. Lumumba, who more than once has evaded arrest or escaped from the capital, under a strong escort of soldiers with heavy, jeep-mounted machineguns.

He was flown here on Friday after being captured at Port Francqui, in remote Kasai Province. He had fled Leopoldville last Sunday and

He interrupted his flight by jumping to Stanleyville, where he apparently intended to make a new bid for power.

Juored and Cuffed

He arrived here dishevelled and mangled and was juored and cuffed.

There was no further news yesterday on preparations by the UAR Embassy and to leave the country.

Col. Mobutu told newsmen that Mr. Lumumba would be tried "in due course" for inciting rebellion in the Army and other "common law crimes."

The Army Chief was the luncheon guest of Gen. Carl Von Horn, the Commander of the U.N. Force in the Congo. Gen. Von Horn is the United States' major policy decisions. According to Gen. Von Horn and Col. Mobutu had come "mainly to relax."

Observers in Leopoldville viewed Col. Mobutu's position as stronger than ever following the capture of Mr. Lumumba. But such is the lat-

SOUTH AFRICA'S FORGOTTEN TRIAL

By STANLEY URY

Trial Hearings Enter Fifth Year

CAPE TOWN (JTA)—The South African Government is today entering its fifth year of trial in the "forgotten trial" of the white-minority government. The trial, which began in 1961, is now in its fifth year. The government has been accused of various crimes, including the murder of political opponents and the suppression of civil liberties. The trial has been a long and arduous process, with the government often claiming that it is necessary for the maintenance of law and order. The trial has also been a source of international criticism, with many countries expressing concern over the human rights situation in South Africa.

Arraigned in court are 29 members of what is known as the Congress Alliance — the African, Indian, Coloured, White and Trade Union Congresses. In 1955, this Congress Alliance summoned a "Congress of the People" which drew up a "Freedom Charter." This is the central document in the trial. It demands equal rights for all races, the restoration of the national wealth to the people, and the division of land among those who work it.

The accused and their witnesses have all denied that it was the intention of the Congress Alliance to achieve these aims by violence. Chief Albert Lutuli, President-General of the African National Congress, said in evidence that the "African National Congress has no intention of destroying the existence of the State, but by applying pressure on the ruling class. even these did not seem to suffice. The fine acoustics of the Fine Auditorium were both a help and a handicap to the orchestra. The strings sounded quite pleasantly, but the woodwinds and brasses were somewhat weak. The conductor, Mr. Yehudi Menuhin, was in excellent form, and his playing was a model of clarity and precision. The orchestra was well rehearsed, and the performance was a credit to the Fine Auditorium.

American Armada Not Really Needed

By J. MALCOLM FERGUSON

LONDON.—The concentration of U.S. naval forces in the Caribbean Sea—two aircraft carriers and four destroyers—is a huge one by local standards. It gives an impression of a massive military presence, but it is not really needed. The American Armada is not really needed. The Soviet Union has been able to maintain its position in the Caribbean without the need for a large naval force. The American Armada is not really needed.

The standard of living in both Nicaragua and Guatemala is relatively low, particularly in comparison with Costa Rica, and to this extent there is an opening for the Communists. But most of the population of these countries are peasants, and the Communists have never heard of Marx or Lenin; they have however heard a lot of Fidel Castro, and they think he's fine.

Given Washington's view of Castro, its perception of Central America is comprehensible. But is President Eisenhower's action likely to be to the advantage of the U.S. in its effect on Central America or Latin America in general?

No comment on this is forthcoming from any major Latin American capital. The U.S. government, it is felt, is likely to do what it thinks is right, and it is not likely to be influenced by the views of the Latin American people.

More interesting has been the reaction — or lack of it — of the Soviet Union. There have been some faint hints of anger from the Russians about North American imperialism, but none of the fire-breathing threats which were forthcoming as recently as July 1961.

At the same time the "New York Times" published a report, bearing all the marks of a calculated leak, suggesting that Moscow was using its influence to try to calm Cuba's nerves down. The wish to avoid a showdown with the United States at this critical moment is understandable.

What is the Soviet Union's position? It is a position of quiet observation. The Soviet Union is not likely to get involved in the Caribbean Sea. The American Armada is not really needed.

KENNEDY AND LINCOLN

Editor, The Jerusalem Post: Sir, — One hears on all sides, doubts and even concern about the fact that President John F. Kennedy was elected. It is a very large margin of popular votes over Mr. Nixon. I may therefore be of interest to compare these figures with the election of 1860, exactly 100 years ago, when Lincoln was elected. There were four candidates: Abraham Lincoln, Stephen A. Douglas, and two others. Lincoln received 1,200,000 votes, and the three others a total of 2,815,817 votes. This shows clearly that Abraham Lincoln was elected by a minority of the votes of the nation; yet it did not prevent him from becoming President.
